DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTION
410 STATE OFFICE BUILDING•NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE 37219

ERNEST PELLEGRIN
COMMISSIONER

March 8, 1984

The Honorable Lamar Alexander
Governor
State of Tennessee and
The General Assembly
State of Tennessee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

In compliance with Title 4, Chapter 4, Section 4-414, Tennessee Code Annotated, I am pleased to submit to you the Annual Report of the Department of Correction for fiscal year beginning July 1, 1982 and ending June 30, 1983. We hope you will find the report describes the many challenges and accomplishments we had during the year.

The major event of the year was the preparation of the Correction Plan for the 80's which sought to respond to the issues in the Grubbs vs. Bradley lawsuit. Although we are under a court order to make many changes, the citizens of Tennessee can be proud that Judge L. Clure Morton had confidence enough in the professional staff of this Department to permit us to design our own solutions to the problems. I think that the Governor, members of the General Assembly, and my two predecessors who served during this fiscal year, H. B. Bradley and William H. Long, should be congratulated for their cooperation in devising these approaches to difficult correction problems.

In this new fiscal year, we are continuing implementation of the Correction Plan for the 80's, meeting the court ordered deadlines for reductions in our prison population, and beginning the design of new policies and programs to improve the quality of Tennessee's correctional system. Our Youth Services Division will be undertaking a major policy development process and will begin a comprehensive planning process to improve the quality and availability of services for youth under our custody.

We hope to report major strides in these efforts at the conclusion of the current fiscal year. Please feel free to provide your comments regarding this report and any improvements you would like in it.

Sincerely,

Ernest Pellegrin

TENNESSEE CORRECTION POLICY

A correctional policy for the State of Tennessee must be publicly expressed. A traditional TDOC management dilemma has been the absence of public policy for Correction that was supported by a majority of the Tennessee taxpayers. The following policy statement was developed as a necessary basis for the recently proposed Correction Plan for the 80's.

Tennessee Corrections: Declaration of Public Policy

1. The correction system is one instrument of social control. It is the most forceful expression of the police power of the state.

2. Except in the case of execution, the correction system exercises social control by the restriction of individual liberty or the threat of it. Such restriction of liberty ranges from strict isolation in a cell to quarterly visits to a probation officer.

3. The restriction of liberty must meet certain standards of humaneness. State and Federal Courts have set or are setting a reasonably high and specific set of minimum standards. There is not much need for policy-makers to spend time arguing what that standard of humaneness ought to be. Tennessee taxpayers have made it clear that they will not tolerate a standard higher than the minimum standard.

4. Because it costs so much, complete restriction of liberty--incarceration--should be used only where other forms of punishment are not appropriate.

   A. For example, it is more appropriate to require an embezzler to work to pay back his victim than to charge the victim and his fellow citizens $9,000 a year to pay for the embezzler's room and board in prison.

   B. In a state where family incomes are sixth from the bottom in the country, there are other urgently compelling ways to spend taxpayers' money. It costs $2,200 a year to educate an elementary or secondary school student, $100 a year for adult education for each of the 600,000 Tennessee adults who cannot pass an eighth grade competency test, $500 for prenatal health care for each of 11,000 mothers and unborn babies who need it, and $4,200 to teach a high school graduate the skills he needs to get a job as a computer programmer.

5. Restriction of liberty is punishment.

   Having established a system to restrict liberty, society does not need to think of additional ways to punish people while they are incarcerated. At the same time, having decided to punish someone by restricting his liberty, society does not need to lessen the punishment by thinking of ways to spend extra money to make that restriction more pleasant than minimum standars of humaneness require.

6. Offenders should work.

Today, the state government correction system restricts the liberty of 11,200 adults who are at work under supervision outside prison walls providing for themselves and their families and are paying their victims back (restitution) and/or paying the public back by public service work. For those other 8,000 adults who are now incarcerated, the correction system's only other duty is to provide them with productive work. The reasons are that work: provides better control of inmates; (2) makes it more likly that the inmate will be an independent, self-sufficient person when he or she emerges from prison; and (3) may produce revenues that reduce the costs of operating the prison system. Inmates will receive essential medical services and other services which meet the minimum standards of humaneness, but there will be no "rehabilitation" or job training programs offered in the adult correction system except those that are directly related to making it possible for prisoners to work at the specific skilled occupations necessary to maintain the prison system. Taxpayers' money for general education or job training programs will be spent first on those persons who by their observance of the state's laws remain outside the correction system and are deserving of the taxpayers' support.

INTRODUCTION AND OVERVIEW

Corrections in Tennessee has changed greatly since the first state penitentiary opened in Nashville in 1831. Fiscal year 1982-83 saw the beginning of another set of major changes in the Department. The approach to corrections in Tennessee, based upon rehabilitation of offenders, was modified significantly. The Department of Correction's major focus in the future will be providing work for inmates to reduce idleness and increase system productivity. Every inmate able to work will be expected to work in the institution, on prison industries or farms or providing public service work to State and local government agencies.

The Correction Plan for the 80's, promulgated in January, 1983, adopts the view that keeping inmates occupied in productive work, and teaching them skills that may be useful when they return to their communities, is the most important facet of correctional life. Implementing this approach requires the realignment of existing institutions to create single purpose institutions; some will become reception centers, others will take on prison industries or farming operations. This redirection of institutional purpose is a departure from past state practice and management of inmates.

The Department of Correction was created thirty years ago, in 1953, when legislation abolishing the Department of Institutions and splitting its components into a Department of Correction and a Department of Mental Health (now Mental Health and Mental Retardation) was adopted by the General Assembly. The Department of Institutions itself was only 30 years old, having been created in 1923, at the time of its abolition.

This overview reflects the major changes that have taken place in the Department of Correction. In the past twenty years, the Department has made a major investment in juvenile community based corrections, created regional correctional facilities for adult males and developed a series of work release centers for adults. The Department now faces the challenge of implementing a Federal District Court order and creating a community corrections program in conjunction with the counties of the State.

The Department of Correction was created by Tennessee Code Annotated 4-3-601. It operates three adult classification centers, six adult male correctional facilities, one prison for women, four community service centers for adult males and females on work release, one facility for mentally disturbed and behavior management of adult offenders, four facilities for juveniles, twelve juvenile group homes, nine probation regional and eleven district offices.

The Department is organized, as of July 1, 1983 into a Commissioner's office and four administrative divisions. The Commissioner's office includes staff attorneys, health services, internal affairs, planning and research, and internal audit. The Division of Adult Services is responsible for the operation of all adult medium and maximum security institutions for men and women, classification programs and prison industries and farm programs. The Division of Community Services operates the community service centers, probation, county reimbursement for housing state prisoner program and volunteer services. The Division of Youth Services is responsible for all juvenile institutions, foster and group homes and juvenile classification. A Division of Administrative Services provides fiscal services, personnel services and engineering services as well as managing all record operations of the department.

Fiscal year 1982-83 has marked a turning point in the Department's operations. The highlights of the year include:

- development of the Correction Plan for the 80's in response to the Federal District Court order in Grubbs v Bradley;
- expansion of restitution programs and public work agency contracts in the community service centers;
- contruction of seven dormitories at Nashville Community Service Center;
- construction of dormitory space at Turney Center, Bledsoe County Regional, and Fort Pillow Farm Facility essentially completed;
- contruction of dormitory space at Morgan County Regional in progress to be completed by November, 1983;
- expansion of Offender-Based State Corrections Information System (OBSCIS) to the probation regional offices;
- development of standards and manuals for pre-sentence reports;
- revision and implementation of Individual Program Plan manual for youth services;
- initiation of a policy development project in Youth Services to revise existing policies and close policy gaps;
- siting of Wayne County Work Camp; and
- closing of guild 17 in Nashville.

MAJOR EVENTS 1982-83

The primary effort for the Tennessee Department of Correction during 1982-83 has been the promulgation of its Correction Plan for the 80's. Fundamental to this plan is the belief that the Tennessee prison system should become a work-orientated, economically efficient system which provides humane custody for convicted felons.

During this time H. B. Bradley and William H. Long served as Commissioners. Judge L. Clure Morton issued a decision in the Grubbs v Bradley suit, and approved our plan for reducing gradually the population of the adult correctional institutions. The Emergency Powers Act was passed by the Legislature which, when activitated upon certification by the Commissioner of Correction, empowers early parole release when the State's prison population exceeds 95 percent of capacity.

This year marked Tennessee's first year of experience with the Criminal Sentencing Reform Act of 1982. This Act, which made all sentences determinate in nature and transferred sentencing responsibility from juries to judges, may have had a significant effect upon the Department of Correction. According to data supplied by the U.S. Department of Justice Bureau of Justice Statistics, between mid 1982 and mid 1983 Tennessee ranked third, behind California and New York, in the increase in the number of its average daily population with a rise of 1,117. In terms of a percentage increase, Tennessee was second with a 14.2 percent rise. While no data has been assembled to indicate whether this increase is a result of the Criminal Sentencing Reform Act; it will be necessary to monitor this development to see if it continues in the future.

The long awaited decision in the Grubbs v Bradley lawsuit came in August, 1982. Judge L. Clure Morton made a significant ruling that declared that parts of Tennessee's adult prison system were unconstitutional. However, instead of ordering specific remedies, Judge Morton directed TDOC to develop its own plans, subject to the review of the court and a court appointed limited special master, for improving the State's correctional system.

Among the findings of the court order were:

- Housing is minimally adequate in most facilities, however, conditions at some facilities specifically constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Those facilities specifically mentioned in this category were units I-IV at Tennessee State Prison and Guild 17 at Nashville Regional Facility. Judge Morton ordered single celling at TSP Units I-IV. This order had the practical effect of reducing the institution's population capacity from 1,900 to 1,200.

- Fort Pillow Farm, Memphis Correctional Center and Tennessee Prison for Women contain housing units that are overcrowded and unwisely used. Morton indicated that conditions at the main building at Nashville Community Service Center and D Block at Brushy Mountain Prison were so intolerable to demand either repairs to those facilities or closure.

- Poor sanitation in both living units and food service areas was the norm in most institutions. Morton singled out the food service at Brushy Mountain Prison and Fort Pillow as failing to meet minimal standards for food storage, preparation and service.

- Rampant violence including assaults and sexual assaults were found at Tennessee State Prison, Fort Pillow and Brushy Mountain Prison. The causes of this violence included overcrowding, idleness, the failure of classification to identify and separate violence prone inmates, insufficient numbers of and inadequate training for correctional officers, poor use of dormitory housing and faulty prison design among other causes. However, the order deferred to the professional judgement of TDOC officials to remedy the problem.

- Health care was inadequate to meet the needs of inmates. Judge Morton noted that experts disagreed on an administrative structure required to remedy the problem and hence declined to instruct TDOC as to its management of health care services. Among the problems found were the provision of care by persons that was beyond their level of training and experience, failure to provide 24 hour medical coverage except for DeBerry Correctional Institute and Nashville Regional Correctional Facility and insufficient mental health services to meet inmate needs (although the available services were constitutionally adequate).

The Court placed the responsibility for fashioning a remedy upon the TDOC. Judge Morton ordered the department and the plaintiffs to agree upon a limited special master to review TDOC proposals for remedying the problems and report to the court regarding those proposals. The court further ordered that within sixty days after a special master was appointed TDOC must submit a plan to remedy the housing conditions at Brushy Mountain Prison and Nashville Community Service Center. Within six months after the Special Master's appointment, TDOC must submit a plan to remedy all other unconstitutional conditions.

The Court had to wait only four and one-half months for the Department's response. On January 3, 1983, the Commissioner of Correction forwarded the Correction Plan for the 80's to the Governor. The Plan for the 80's became the first long range plan for the Department since the Five Year Master Plan was promulgated in 1977.

The Correction Plan for the 80's concerned itself solely with the adult corrections operations of the Department. As such, it enunciated, for the first time, a corrections public policy for the State of Tennessee (that policy is found at the beginning of this report). The Department produced a plan that not only laid out solutions to the problems raised in the court suit but also provided the Department with a blueprint to improve its efficiency and effectiveness.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE PLAN

- Establishment of three regional classification centers; one in each of the three grand divisions of the State. Facilities to be converted to classification include: Brushy Mountain Prison, Nashville Regional Correctional Facility and Memphis Correctional Center. These three institutions would become East, Middle and West Tennessee Reception Centers respectively.

- Creation of a classification system with an emphasis on placement of inmates in institutions based on their job skills as well as their personal safety and prison system needs;

- Reduction in the population at Tennessee State Prison from 1,900 to 1,000. Inmates housed at TSP would include those requiring medical attention, maximum or close security (one half of all inmates at TSP), administrative segregation inmates, all inmates refusing to work at other institutions and all voluntary check ins after 15 days;

- Realignment of existing institutions to serve a single purpose:

  - continue the prison farms at Morgan County Regional, Bledsoe County Regional, Turney Center Annex and Fort Pillow as well as using the current farmland at Cockrill Bend,

  - consolidate prison industries at Turney Center including the closing of prison industries at TSP and Fort Pillow,

  - provide education programs to inmates at Lake County Regional with the concentration of the education program to be on developing skills usable within the prison system as well as the post-release world;

- Conversion of the Highland Rim School for Girls at Tullahoma into a Tennessee Correction Academy to conduct the pre-service and in-service training for all TDOC personnel;

- Addition of 930 beds to system capacity by June, 1984 including four 120 bed work camps and a 450 bed farming facility;

- Passage of an Emergency Powers Act to allow the Governor, upon certification of the Commissioner of TDOC, that the corrections system has reached 95% of rated capacity to allow the early parole of some inmates. The Parole Board would be authorized to develop criteria for early release. The rated capacity would be established by the legislature every year as part of the budget process. The Emergency release process would cease when the population was reduced to a given percentage of capacity;

- Upgrading of medical services to provide 24 hour coverage at all facilities, assure standard emergency equipment care training at all institutions, contract for all specialized medical services, eliminate use of inmate health care workers in direct patient care, and provide a role for health care staff in institutional sanitation assurance;

- Hiring of 53 new probation officers in the system both to upgrade the quality of probation services and to meet the pre-sentence investigation requirements of the Criminal Sentencing Reform Act of 1982;

- Development of specific recommendations to assist local corrections, specifically counties and circuit courts to develop programs that would result in more equitable use of state prison capacity and upgrade the calibre of local jails; and

- Realignment of 204 existing positions and the addition of 276 new positions to accomplish the Plan. Savings of $4.0 million were forecast with an additional appropriation of $3.1 million necessary to implement the Plan. An additional $26 million was requested in capital funds for construction of the work camps and the prison farm.

Implementation of the plan was scheduled to begin on June 1, 1983. An implementation team was created on March 1, 1983 to monitor implementation. Budget requests were made to the General Assembly to implement the plan. With few exceptions the General Assembly provided the funds for implementation. In addition, the General Assembly passed the Emergency Powers Act of 1983 (Public Acts 1983, Chapter 325).

The Plan for the 80's would form the basis of many significant and far-reaching changes in the Department of Correction. Comprehensive implementation of the plan would affect every institution and office of the Department. Those changes were intended to assist the Department in meeting the requirements of the court order.

Adult Services

The Division of Adult Services is responsible for the custody of all adult felony offenders committed in state correctional facilities, and for coordinating the operations of all the facilities. This includes maintenance of adequate security, classification and transfer of inmates, supervision and modification of programs, and enforcement of departmental policies and procedures.

The Division is undergoing a reorganization which calls for each institution to have one specific program purpose. High value for inmates is being placed on classification, full-time work, expanded off-hours recreation, and intensive full-time training based on departmental need. The eleven correctional facilities operated by the Division of Adult Services are as follows: Tennessee State Penitentiary, Tennessee Prison for Women, DeBerry Correctional Institute, Middle Tennessee Reception Center, Turney Center Industrial Prison, Lake County Regional Correctional Facility, Fort Pillow Prison and Farm, West Tennessee Reception Center, East Tennessee Reception Center, Bledsoe County Regional Correctional Facility, and Morgan County Regional Correctional Facility. All adult males committed to the Department enter the Reception Center, presently located at the Nashville Regional Correctional Facility. This center provides testing, evaluation, and subsequent placement, as bed space is available, at an institution based on the resident's security and programming needs. All female offenders are received and classified at the Tennessee Prison for Women. Next year, three adult male classification centers will be established; one in each Grand Division of the State.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Transferred all vocational education equipment and other educational materials from various adult male institutions to Lake County Regional Correctional Facility;

- Received approval to construct a vocational education building at Lake Count, Regional Correctional Facility. Anticipated completion date is June 1985;

- Began renovation of Cell Block D at East Tennessee Reception Center (formerly Brushy Mountain Prison) with an anticipated completion of December, 1983;

- Planned for systematic reduction of inmate population with a schedule to be approved by the Federal District Court in the fall of 1983;

- Established an Inmate Job Tracking Program to increase employment of inmates and to reduce inmate idleness;

- Developed a formal facility inspection policy with initial inspections to be conducted by early 1984;

- Undertook the redesign of both initial classification and reclassification policies and procedures. Implementation of the new classification system to be completed, along with training of classification staff, in early fiscal year 1983-84;

- Relocated Central Dispatch operation from Middle Tennessee Reception Center to Central Office;

- Established a sawmill operation at Turney Center Industrial Prison and Farm,

- Discontinued beef production at Bledsoe County Regional Correctional Facility and relocated program to Morgan County Regional Correctional Facility;

- Initiated phase out of poultry operation at Nashville Community Service Center with planned expansion at Bledsoe County Regional Correctional Facility;

- Increased field crop yields particularly at Fort Pillow Farm. Corn averaged 150 bushels per acre and soybeans averaged 35 bushels per acre;

- Used over 600 inmate laborers on farm operations with planned expansion to over 1,000 inmates in fiscal year 1983-84; and

- Produced 474,702 gallons of milk and 777,915 dozen eggs.

Youth Services

The purpose of the Division of Youth Services is to provide the least restrictive needed form of treatment, training, and rehabilitation for youth committed to the Department. There are four program areas: probation and aftercare, group homes, foster home and contract agencies, and institutions. In keeping with the intent of T.C.A. 37-201, emphasis is given to community-based programs.

The initial classification is conducted on a regional basis subsequent to a child's commitment. This phase screens those children to be served through community-based programs and gathers information on those who go to institutions. The information gathered through community classification reinforces the more extensive classification accomplished at the institutional setting. All the testing and diagnosis of the child's strengths and weaknesses is formulated into an individual treatment plan. Classification establishes treatment goals for eight areas of the child's development including dental, academic/intellectual, vocational/prevocational, recreation/leisure, independent living skills, personality/behavior, security, and aftercare considerations.

Probation and aftercare counselors provide supervision and liaison with parents, schools, and other service agencies for youths in the home. Children may be placed on probation by the Court as an alternative to commitment to the Department. Aftercare is provided for every youth returning to his/her home from a residential commitment. Probation and aftercare services are provided through nine regional offices and eleven field offices located across the State. Interstate Compact agreements for juveniles are also coordinated by the Compact Administrator in the Youth Services Division.

Community residential services offer three types of programs: 1) foster homes, 2) contract services from licensed child caring agencies, and 3) State operated group homes. All of these provide the children supervision, counseling, food, shelter, medical, and dental care. All programs utilize community resources: public and vocational schools, health centers, employment training, and church activities. Foster care and contract services are offered in each region and are coordinated by foster home counselors. There are 12 group homes throughout the State. Treatment is provided in leased homes furnished to provide a home-like atmosphere. At the group home residents are provided 24-hour supervision, meals, tutoring, and counseling.

Children who require a more secure environment will be provided a more structured level of service in our institutions. The youths who require more secure environments are removed from home and community, and placed in one of four institutions. Each of these facilities provide a full range of services. Such placement is intended to restrict the youth who have exhibited behavior which makes it unlikely that they will succeed in community-based programs. The four correctional facilities operated by the Division of Youth Services are as follows: Spencer Youth Center, Taft Youth Center, Tennessee Youth Center and Wilder Youth Development Center.

HIGHLIGHTS

All Youth Services Divisions

- Revised and implemented Individual Program Plan (IPP) Manual with Department of Correction staff from all locations receiving training.

- Started policy writing project to revise existing policies and develop new policies where gaps have been found. Field training was provided to policy authors.

- Improved communication and problem solving between institutions and juvenile probation, reducing juvenile court objections to home placements by 59% from 43 in Fiscal Year 81-82 to 19 in Fiscal Year 82-83.

Juvenile Institutions

- Began internal monitoring for policy compliance on a quarterly basis.

- Increased training by 200% over previous years.

- Convened an education task force to study the educational program at Spencer Youth Center. Recommendations from the task force will be implemented.

- Developed plan for transfer of females from Highland Rim School to Spencer Youth Center.

- Improved Taft Youth Center community relations through student community assistance projects and cooperative inservice training with local teachers and institution teachers.

- Reduced escape from custody at Taft Youth Center from an average of 10 per month to 3.5 per month.

- Established program for students to perform routine cleaning and maintenance chores as vocational and life skills training. Students have accomplished much of the needed cleaning and painting in the institutions.

- Developed additional vocational program at Spencer Youth Center.

- Negotiated with the Division of Mental Health Services for on-site IPP monitoring at our institutions beginning in the spring, of 1983. Developed and implemented a joint IPP monitoring with the Division of Mental Retardation Services. Among the results are:

  - Trained five teams to monitor each juvenile facility for IPP compliance. Each team will be joined by a DMH representative every other quarter.

  - Completed two rounds of quarterly monitoring with DOC and DMH staff.

- Made significant improvement in monitoring scores obtained by DMH monitor at all DOC facilities.

- Determined data base for new management information system regarding all mental health/mental retardation students.

- Developed an IPP monitoring instrument referenced to existing policies and procedures.

Foster and Group Homes

- Increased the number of temporary placements by 48% (123) to divert committed students from institutional classification.

- Monitored the files of foster home counselors statewide to assure standards were maintained.

- Persuaded the community of Elizabethton to permit the Department and Elizabethton Group Home to drop its limitation of accepting female status offenders only.

- Increased the number of students served in foster care by 40 despite having to limit allotted spaces by region for FY 82-83.

Juvenile Probation

- Began quarterly review of all probation and after-care case files to monitor and supervise daily activity. After initiating the review, the district director randomly samples the results when visiting the other regions.

- Initiated regular quarterly monitoring visits to each region.

- Decreased the length of time the Division supervises students on after-care from an average of 28 months to 24 months.

- Developed a regional Children's Resource Manual which provides staff with information on alternatives available for providing assistance to our students and their families.

- Developed the first social history and social history manual and implemented with training provided to all staff. The social history is used by community and institutional classification teams when determining the appropriate placement for the child.

Community Services

For Community Services, 1982-83 was a year of transition. The Plan for the 80's put increased stress upon the development of community alternatives. The Department's work release program expanded during the year. Probation services received data terminals in each regional office. The County Incentive Program expanded significantly during the year.

At the end of the year a reorganization took place that brought the Rehabilitative Services section into the Community Services Division. For the first time, all of TDOC's community oriented programs were in the same organizational unit. This reorganization, the Department believes, will lead to the development of effective community oriented programs for lesser offenders.

Rehabilitative Services

The Rehabilitative Services Section is responsible for the operation of four (4) Community Service Centers providing programs of work release, public service agency contracts and restitution. This section is also responsible for the work release program at the Tennessee Prison for Women.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Public agency contacts increased, and each center is working closely with other state agencies and local governmental agencies in providing more inmate labor.
- The development of the work camp concept.
- The transfer of Rehabilitative Services from the Adult Services Division to the Community Services Division.
- The construction of seven dormitories at the Nashville Community Service Center.
- Each Community Service Center has increased the number of inmates on restitution; significantly in the area of community restitution at no cost to local government and/or non-profit agencies.

During FY 83-84 the Division of Community Services will develop, and construct work camps across the state. The primary purpose of these camps will be to provide a work oriented, constitutional system for inmates classified medium and minimum security. This work oriented program will be able to furnish inmate labor to other state and local government agencies. The Rehabilitative Service Section will monitor these camps for adherence to policies and procedures.

Probation

The Probation section is responsible for those offenders whose sentence has been suspended by the Courts and placed on probation to the Department. Probation is also responsible for conducting pre-sentence investigations for the Court. This section also supervises offenders assigned for Diversionary Supervision and Interstate Compact cases.

HIGHLIGHTS

- CRT Terminals placed in each Regional office and Central office.
- Developed standards and Manual of Instructions for all pre-sentence reports to implement Criminal Sentencing Reform Act of 1982.

- Increased probation supervision fee collections from 1982-82 by 4.5% to $239,958.70 and collected $240,260.45 for victims of crime in Tennessee.

- Prepared 9,150 pre-sentence, prison and diversion reports on offenders.

County Programs

The Division of County Programs began movement toward a drastic change of focus during FY 82-83. Prior to that time, the primary role of the division was the maintenance of county jail contracts. The new County Incentive Program, designed to divert felony prisoners from state to county facilities and to provide funds to improve county facilities, had 21 participating counties. During FY 82-83, that program became the focal point of the division, and participation grew to 37 counties.

Not only were jail contracts no longer the primary focus of county programs, but the decision was made to phase out this program entirely. The first stage of this plan was accomplished in June, 1983, when jail contract placements were reduced from 320 to 80.

After the reduction of contract placements, county programs began to branch into additional areas of assistance to local correctional programs. On a small scale, we began to provide consultation services to counties wanting either to improve their facilities or build new ones. This was accomplished by assessing the needs of the county and then involving department staff with expertise in those areas of need.

With the department's commitment to provide jobs for all appropriate inmates, county programs began to coordinate inmate labor for county work projects. In the spring of 1983, negotiations were begun to provide inmate labor for the contruction of workhouse dormitories for Rutherford County. By June, 1983, it was clear that a new endeavor of cooperation between state and county government was well underway. If successful, this project and others of its kind would be milestones in the achievement of the real purpose of the County Programs Division-state assistance to local correctional problems.

Volunteer Services

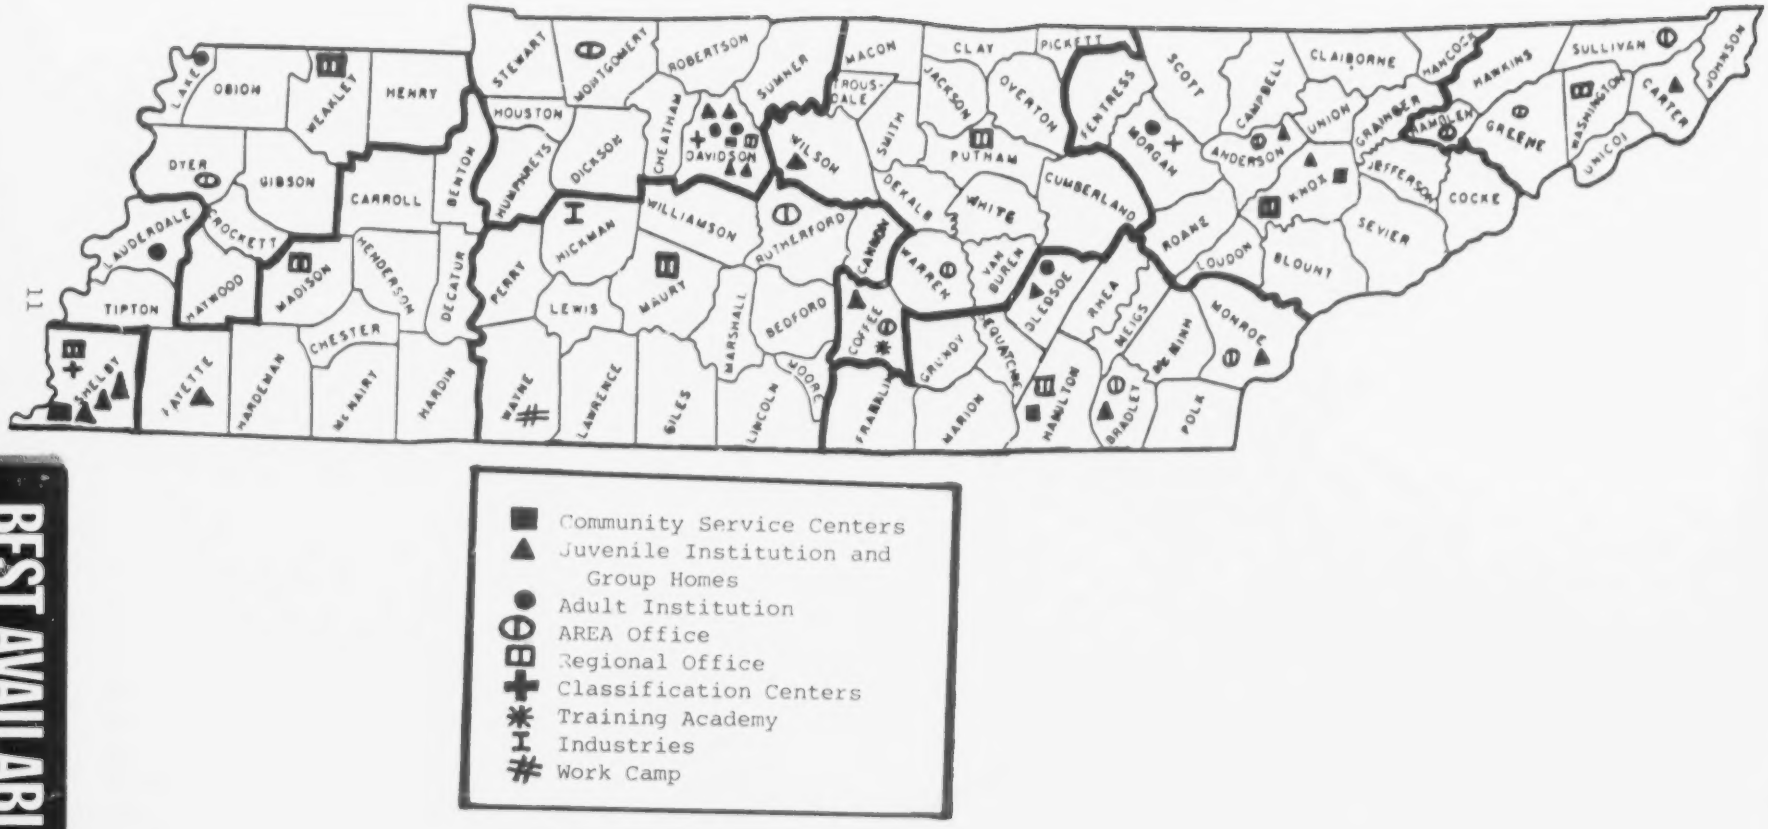

The purpose of Volunteer Services is to provide assistance to the Department of Correction where needed assistance has been identified by staff to meet agency objectives.

Those wishing to volunteer must complete an application, be interviewed by the Volunteer Coordinator and participate in a training program before a volunteer assignment can be made. After completion of training, the volunteer receives an identification card and is assigned to a volunteer job. The volunteer's supervisor will be the staff person responsible for the service being provided.

Volunteers work in all areas of the Department of Correction. This includes adult and juvenile probation and institutions and juvenile group homes.
